

Terms and Conditions of Use

Auszug aus dem Lizenzvertrag
Abridged version of License Agreement

(...)

1. Who can use JSTOR?

We define our "Authorized Users" as:

a. People with access through an institution that is licensing the Services on their behalf, namely a college, university, secondary school, public library, museum, foundation, government agency, research Center, corporate/for-profit organization, or scholarly society ("Institutional Licensee"). This includes individuals i) permitted to be on the premises of an Institutional Licensee and access the Services while on site and ii) who may also access the Services remotely, specifically:

- current students
- affiliated researchers and lecturers
- staff
- patrons of a public library or museum that has licensed remote access
- members of a scholarly society
- in the case of JSTOR Collection content (...), individuals who have a degree from an Institutional Licensee that has licensed access for alumni

(...)

3. What can I do with Content?

a. ITHAKA encourages Authorized Users to engage in research activities, including downloading or printing Content in reasonable amounts for non-commercial, scholarly purposes, as well as use the Content on its platform in the following ways (so long as you abide by the prohibited uses in Section 4 below) (collectively the "Permitted Uses"):

- classroom or organizational instruction and activities (for example, a discreet handout or projection of a Content item within a classroom setting);
- in Student assignments, educational presentations, and Student or faculty curatorial portfolios (so long as such use conforms to the customary and usual practice in the field), or in research papers or dissertations, including reproductions of the dissertations (provided such reproductions do not include Books, and are only for personal use, library deposit, and/or use solely within your Institutional Licensee);
- sharing of portions of Content with other individuals for the purposes of collaboration and discussion (for example, sending an individual Content item to a fellow scholar for the purpose of collaboration on a research project);

- if you are an author or other creator of a journal article, incorporating your article into other databases or websites as long as you have any needed prior permission from the publisher and/or other rights holders;
- linking, specifically, incorporating stable URLs JSTOR provides for each Content item into other online spaces to facilitate or direct access (for example, incorporating a link to an assigned Content item into an online syllabi);
- use ITHAKA's Constellate service on its platform <https://constellate.org/> for certain types of text and data analysis specified in the Terms and Conditions of Use for the Constellate platform. The Constellate service includes selected content items portions of which are contained in the JSTOR database;
- for the JSTOR Collection, interlibrary loan ("ILL"), specifically, requests your library makes on your behalf to an Institutional Licensee for an item of JSTOR Collections Content ("Interlibrary Loan" or "ILL"). Institutional Licensees may fulfill such requests via secure means provided that such use is not at a volume that would substitute for a subscription to the journal or acquisition of access to a Book (for example, ILL of a Book shall be restricted to a single copy of a Book chapter); and
- use in accordance with the principles of fair use under Section 107 of the United States Copyright Act except as follows:
 - For Artstor Collection: Institutional Licensees and Authorized Users make such fair use at their own sole risk (such that ITHAKA shall not be liable for any uses they make of Artstor Collection in reliance on fair use including, but not limited to, and despite any language to the contrary in Section 9(a) below).
 - For Community Collections: ITHAKA takes no position as to whether Community Collections may be used pursuant to the fair use, educational exceptions or other similar provisions of the copyright laws or other intellectual property rights laws in the United States.

b. Please note different, possibly broader, use may apply to certain types of Content, specifically:

- Early Journal Content. In addition to all permitted uses described above, you are free to copy, use, and redistribute the Early Journal Content in part or in whole for noncommercial purposes. Please be considerate of other users and do not use robots or other devices or coordinate activity that may disrupt the JSTOR platform to systematically download these works. We ask that you please acknowledge JSTOR as the source of the Early Journal Content by either linking directly to the JSTOR site using the stable URL for the Content item or, if using the Early Journal Content offline, by stating "Courtesy of JSTOR."
- Open JSTOR Collection. Open Artstor Collection. and Community Collection. The Open JSTOR Collection, the Open Artstor Collection, and certain portions of Community Collection Content may be subject to the terms of a Creative Commons license or other rights statement or license, as indicated in the copyright statement or metadata for the content. If an Open JSTOR Collection, Open Artstor Collection, or Community Collection item has different terms posted where the content appears, those terms have precedence over these Terms and Conditions of Use.

Please note that JSTOR Licensed Content downloaded or printed in a manner consistent with these Terms and Conditions may continue to be used as permitted by these Terms and Conditions even if the license allowing such access later terminates or expires.

4. What use of JSTOR and its Content is prohibited?

It is important that JSTOR respects the permissions it receives from publishers, rights-holders, and contributors and ensures the Service platforms are reliably available. Therefore, unless otherwise expressly permitted for Early Journal Content, Open JSTOR Collection Content, or Community Collection Content, Institutional Licensees and users may not:

- a. use or authorize the use of the Services or any Content for commercial purposes or gains, such as selling access to the Services or any part of the Content. For JSTOR Collection content, this does not include research that may later be incorporated into something sold, for example, a book containing academic research;
- b. for Artstor Content, use in electronic or print materials that are disseminated for commercial purposes (such as by a scholarly or commercial press);
- c. except for the purpose of collaboration or discussion or with respect to an author's own articles as described in Section 3, provide and/or authorize access to the Content to persons or entities other than Authorized Users, including but not limited to by incorporating Content items into an unrestricted database or website;
- d. make available JSTOR Licensed Content or Artstor Collection Content in a manner that would substitute for direct access to such content on the Service platforms;
- e. attempt to override, circumvent, or disable any encryption features or software protections employed by the Service platforms or undertake any activity such as the use of computer programs that automatically download or export Content as those computer programs may interfere with, disrupt, or otherwise burden the JSTOR server(s) or any third-party server(s) being used or accessed in connection with the Service platforms;
- f. systematically print out, download, reproduce, or distribute (or collaborate with others to systematically print out, download, reproduce, or distribute) significant portions or a bulk of the Content, including but not limited to, downloading or printing substantial portions of a run of a journal, a collection contained within Artstor Collection, or stocking or replacing print holdings;
- g. include the Content or portions thereof in course packs, electronic reserves, repositories, or organizational intranets (as linking may be used instead);
- h. for Read-Only Users or JPASS Users, violate the download restrictions which apply to the service;
- i. for Artstor Collection, make any adaptation or modification of, or derivative work of such Artstor Collection items, unless such activity is done solely for teaching or learning purposes in a classroom setting or coursework for an Institutional Licensee's Authorized Users;

j. modify, obscure, or remove any copyright notice or other attribution included in the Content; or

k. make any use, display, performance, reproduction, or distribution that exceeds or violates these Terms and Conditions of Use.

(...)

8. What intellectual property rights apply?

a. The Service Platform and Content. The Service platforms, PEP Devices, and any trademarks, issued patents, and patent applications, copyrights and copyright registrations and applications, rights in ideas, designs, works of authorship, derivative works, and all other intellectual property rights (collectively, "Intellectual Property") relating to the Service platforms and PEP Devices are proprietary to ITHAKA and all Intellectual Property related to the Content provided by ITHAKA's participating libraries, universities, publishers, scholarly societies, and other Content contributors are proprietary to them, subject to the rights of third parties.

b. ITHAKA and Institutional Licensee Trademarks. ITHAKA's and Institutional Licensee's names or trademarks may not be used without permission except: (i) ITHAKA may use Institutional Licensees' names and/or the names of their libraries alongside the names of other participants in brochures or other materials identifying institutions participating in its Services, and (ii) Institutional Licensees are encouraged to use JSTOR's or Artstor's name and logo to announce participation to Authorized Users and to train Authorized Users on the use of the Services.

c. DMCA Notifications. If you believe that content in the Primary Source Materials or Community Collection violates your copyright or otherwise violates your rights, please send a written notice to JSTOR directed to the Office of the General Counsel, JSTOR, One Liberty Plaza, 165 Broadway, 5th FL., New York, NY, 10006 or send an email to the address listed at the U.S. Copyright Office DMCA Designated Agent Directory. Please provide with your notice the following information, consistent with the Digital Millennium Copyright Act: (a) a physical or electronic signature of a person authorized to act on behalf of the copyright owner; (b) identification of the copyrighted work(s) claimed to have been infringed; (c) identification of the infringing material and information that will permit JSTOR to locate the material; (d) information that will permit us to contact you, including an address, telephone number, and, if available, an electronic mail address at which you may be contacted; (e) a statement by you that, in your good faith belief, use of the material in the manner complained of is not authorized by the copyright owner, its agent, or the law; and (f) a Statement that the information in the notification is accurate, and that you are authorized to act on behalf of the owner of an exclusive right that is allegedly infringed. Once JSTOR receives this notification, or if JSTOR learns of the claim from another source, JSTOR may remove such content pending the resolution of the claim.

(...)