

Terms and Conditions for the Use of OECD iLibrary

Auszug aus dem Lizenzvertrag
Abridged version of License Agreement

Definitions

“Authorised Users” - individuals affiliated with the Customer who are authorised to access OECD Subscribed Material, in particular:

1. for Customers who are academic institutions and not-for-profit organisations; members of faculty or staff - whether permanent, temporary, contract, visiting or retired - or students, alumni or other persons permitted to use Customer's library services;
2. for all other institutional Customers: current members of staff, whether on a permanent, temporary or contract basis;
3. for individual Customers: the Customer alone.

“You” – a user of the OECD iLibrary.

“Customer” – the person or institution paying the OECD iLibrary Subscription Fee on behalf of Authorised Users.

“OECD” – the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, publisher and, unless otherwise indicated, the copyright holder of the OECD Subscribed Material.

“OECD Subscribed Material” – digital content including but not limited to data, publications and multimedia products (sound, image, software, etc.) accessible on OECD iLibrary and for which the Customer has paid a Subscription Fee. It includes the back catalogue of relevant titles.

“OECD iLibrary” – an online service containing OECD Subscribed Material that benefits from additional formats, features and functionalities which are accessible subject to a Subscription Fee.

(...)

Grant of Access to OECD iLibrary

In consideration of the requisite Subscription Fee and agreement to abide by these Terms and Conditions and the Terms and Conditions of the OECD Website, the OECD grants the Customer a non-exclusive and non-transferable right to access OECD iLibrary and display OECD Subscribed Material on its secure internal network for use by Authorised Users. Authorised Users may access the OECD Subscribed Material either on the Customer's premises or from a remote location. According to this agreement access is granted to Authorised Users at all authorised sites as defined below.

(...)

To find out more about the information the OECD collects when You or Authorised Users access OECD iLibrary, and how the OECD handles the information required to enable access to OECD iLibrary, please consult the OECD's Privacy Policy: www.oecd.org/privacy.

Additional Rights Associated with Permitted Use and Copy Restrictions

In addition to the rights already granted to all users, Authorised Users can incorporate OECD Subscribed Material in teaching materials, course packs and reserves (both digital and print, as well as other formats adapted to the needs of the visually impaired), for distance learning, Massive Open Online Courses (MOOCs) and scholarly communication.

Each time You cite an OECD publication, You must include suitable acknowledgment of the OECD as source and copyright owner. If You would like to use content found on the OECD iLibrary for commercial purposes or any other use (e.g. translation rights), please see the relevant section in the Terms and Conditions of the OECD Website at www.oecd.org/termsandconditions. Neither recovery of direct costs by the Customer from Authorised Users, nor use by the Customer or Authorised Users of OECD Subscribed Material in the course of non-commercial research funded by a commercial organisation is deemed to constitute commercial use.

Customers may make complete single electronic copy of OECD Subscribed Material for the purpose of maintenance of service and long-term archiving. Customers who are Academic and Not-For-Profit Organisations may transfer OECD Subscribed Material in the context of an electronic Inter-Library Loan, provided that such loans are non-commercial and nonrecurring.

In addition, Authorised Users may use OECD Subscribed Material to perform and engage in text/data mining activities (TDM) for academic research and other educational purposes. The results of these activities can be mounted, loaded and integrated on a secure internal network and used in accordance with these Terms and Conditions. Authorised Users may not display or distribute any part of the OECD Subscribed Material on any electronic network, including the Internet. Authorised Users may, however, display or distribute OECD Subscribed Material via a secure internal network for the limited purposes described in these Terms and Conditions.

The OECD reserves the right to limit or suspend any IP address's access to text/data mining activities at any time and without notice for any reason, including if the OECD determines that You are using or are attempting to use the text/data mining activities and/or the collected text/data in violation of these Terms and Conditions, in such a way as to harm the OECD or any other party, or if You are placing too great a strain on the infrastructure necessary for making the OECD Subscribed Material available to a reasonable number of people. You agree not to use any technical means to interfere with the OECD's monitoring of usage of the above-mentioned resources. The OECD reserves the right to use any technical means to overcome attempted technical interference with usage monitoring.

(...)

Restrictions on Usage

Except as provided otherwise in these Terms and Conditions, the transmission of OECD Subscribed Material to any third party who is not an Authorised User, via any means including but not limited to the Internet, the World-Wide Web, or e-mail, is expressly forbidden. Commercial usage or redistribution is strictly prohibited. The Customer may provide concurrent access to OECD iLibrary to multiple Authorised Users on a single site only, except in the case of Academic and Not-For-Profit Organisations with one or more campuses. (...) Walk-in users may access the OECD Subscribed Material only on the Customer's premises, including via a wireless secure internal network (Wi-Fi).

Transfer Restrictions

Access to OECD Subscribed Material is granted solely to the Customer and its Authorised Users and may not be transferred without prior written consent from the OECD. Any authorised transferee shall be bound by these Terms and Conditions and limited warranty. In no event may You transfer, assign, rent, lease, sell or otherwise dispose of OECD Subscribed Material on a temporary or permanent basis, except as provided otherwise in these Terms and Conditions.

(...)